

Gettysburg College Plays Host to Mothers in First Annual Observance Here

More Than 400 Mothers Are Guests of Sons and Daughters, Students at Local Institution; Are Feted and Feasted in Two Days of Ceremonies; Honored at Banquet.

"An infant when her love first came—
A man, I find it just the same;
Reverently I breathe her name,
The blessed name of Mother."

An experiment in the fusing of motherhood with filial love and affection reached a splendid and successful culmination on the campus at Gettysburg College here over the week-end in the first annual observance of Mother and Son's Day at the local institution. Mothers, from the rock-ribbed coast of Maine to the fertile valley of the Shenandoah, came to Gettysburg College, were feted and completely succumbed to the spirit of the occasion.

Never before in the history of this reverent battlefield institution has a similar occasion been held. Consequently there can be no comparison with past achievements. But predictions can and were made to the effect that Gettysburg College has set a precedent for other colleges and universities in arranging a program of entertainment for mothers.

Honors and tributes galore were paid to the more than 400 mothers of college students who assembled in Gettysburg to participate in the fore-runner of an annual custom which promises to increase locally with each succeeding year, and at the same time spread to every college and university in the land. A week later than national observance of Mother's Day, the event at Gettysburg College was not a wit less successful. Indeed it seemed as though the extra week of anticipation made realization more enjoyable and more successful.

Hearty Welcome

From the moment the several hundred mothers, some youthful in appearance, others matronly, and still others aged, reached the beautiful green campus at the college, they were figuratively carried about on the shoulders of their sons, and in a few instances their daughters. And those sons and daughters, whose mothers were not present, or who had lost their maternal parent through death, helped their fellow-students entertain.

Mother's Day at Gettysburg College in 1925 will go down in the school's history as one of the Red Letter occasions to which it can justly point with pride. Mothers met other mothers, until all were fused into one large family, just as the students at the local school have learned to look upon their group as one large college family. There were no distinctions drawn by reason of position or wealth; all were equal in the great and common bond of Motherhood.

Following registration Saturday afternoon, President and Mrs. Henry W. A. Hanson greeted each of the college's guests and presided at a tea at the president's home, familiarly known to every alumnus and student of the college as the "White House." No hostess was ever more gracious or more considerate of the welfare of her guests than Mrs. Hanson, who, although younger than many of her guests, was as efficient and capable a hostess as could be found anywhere.

Have Busy Day

While the mothers would have lingered over tea, there were many functions scheduled for Saturday afternoon, and soon the visitors were viewing a competitive drill of the three college R. O. T. C. units, after a picture of the mothers with the embryo officers had been snapped.

The drill concluded, a baseball game was called between teams, wearing the Orange and Blue of Gettysburg and the Green and Grey of Western Maryland College, Westminster, Maryland. And just to add to the pleasure of the visiting mothers, the Battlefield Bullets defeated their Maryland opponents by the score 10 to 0.

An incident which gripped the heartstrings of the large crowd of spectators at the baseball game occurred in the fifth inning, after Edward "Snaps" Emanuel, Gettysburg's stellar athlete, was rendered unconscious by a foul tip from off his own bat. A grey-haired woman separated herself from the grandstand crowd, and hurried out onto the diamond where the athlete lay white and still. It was Emanuel's mother, and under her gentle ministrations her sturdy son soon revived, finishing the game.

Sustained applause followed for fully five minutes, as the relieved mother took her place with the grandstand throng. The incident seemed only to cement more closely the bond between every other student and his mother and many silent prayers were wafted heavenward because of the fact that Emanuel was not hurt more seriously and that his mother was spared extra care and worry.

Pressure of the evening's activities necessitated reduction of the scheduled nine inning game to seven innings.

Then at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon followed one of the feature events of the week-end celebration, the Mother's Day banquets. So great was the number of reservations for

TO DEDICATE N. Y. MONUMENT HERE SEPT. 9TH

$30,000 Tribute to 41 Division and Brigade Commanders to be Unveiled.

New York's latest monument on the Gettysburg battlefield, honoring the 41 divisions and brigade commanders not elsewhere honored on the field, will be unveiled and dedicated here at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of September 9. The monument costs approximately $30,000.

This was announced Sunday by Charles A. Shaw, chairman of the New York Monuments' Commission, who is in Gettysburg with Charles S. Barker, another member of the commission, to make final arrangements for the exercises in September.

Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, has been invited to deliver the dedicatory address. While his acceptance has not been definitely announced, it is believed that the New York executive will be here for the ceremonies.

Detailed plans for the exercises in connection with the unveiling have not been formulated as yet, nor have all the speakers been selected, said Chairman Shaw.

Official Party

The dedicatory exercises will be witnessed by an official party from New York state, consisting of approximately 150 legislators and their wives, who will come here aboard a special train. In addition plans are being made to have a delegation of not less than 150 veterans of the Civil War, preferably men who fought here, attend the dedication.

The last monument erected on the field here by New York state was that of Major-General Francis C. Barlow, dedicated and unveiled on Barlow's Knoll, north of town, in 1923.

New York's latest tribute to division and brigade commanders, to whom no suitable markers have yet been reared on the local battlefield, is to cost approximately $30,000 when completed and dedicated.

The new monument, finishing touches on which are now being placed, is situated on South Hancock avenue, not far from the Pennsylvania monument, and some 250 yards north of the junction of Hancock avenue with United States avenue.

An Open Portico

The new tribute is in the form of an exedra, or open portico. It is semi-circular in shape, with a high back, on which are incised the names of the division and brigade commanders honored by the memorial. There is a seat around the portico, and an eagle, with outspread wings, surmounts the rear above the back.

Directly under the eagle and the New York state coat of arms, on a tablet, is a dedicatory inscription with the following wording:

"The state of New York, in recognition of the services rendered by those corps, division and brigade commanders at Gettysburg, not elsewhere recognized on this field."

According to Chairman Shaw, the memorial is a complete history of New York state at Gettysburg, since the names and regiments of all commanding officers of New York regiments are noted on the monument.

The memorial is constructed of granite. Plans and specifications were prepared by Edward P. Casey, of New York, architect of the New York state monument at Antietam. Models for the eagle and the coat of arms and the remainder of the architectural ornaments were furnished by Jerome Brush, of New York.

Local Soldier Re-enlists For Three More Years

Sergeant Charles E. Myrick, who has served six years in the engineering corps of the United States army, and who has been spending several weeks at his home here, has re-enlisted for a period of three years in the same branch of the service. He went to Harrisburg over the week-end after which he will be sent to Camp Meade, Maryland. He had been stationed at Camp Humphries, Virginia.

William Cavalier, 15-Year Old Boy Slayer, Sentenced to Death

(By Associated Press.)

Pottsville, Pa., May 18.—William Cavalier, the 15-year-old slayer of his grandmother, was sentenced to die in the electric chair this morning. He stood awkwardly before the judge looking at the floor, while sentence was being pronounced by Judge Koch, but otherwise showed no signs of emotion. His face was calm as he looked at the judge, after his sentence had been imposed. He seemed the least affected of all those who filled the large court room.

In pronouncing sentence Judge Koch told him that he had been found guilty of murder in the first degree and the jury had recommended mercy, but there was no alternative provided by the law to permit him to impose other than the sentence of death. The judge was visibly affected as he read the death sentence.

Cavalier's mother was not in the court room at the time. He gazed about the big room as he was brought in for sentence as though searching for persons he might know.

Since the commission of the crime Cavalier has been held in the home of detention for juveniles, but after the sentence was imposed he was taken in charge by the sheriff and placed in a cell in the county prison to wait the next move on the part of his counsel.

To Appeal Case

He took with him his phonograph which has been his greatest source of amusement since his arrest.

His counsel announced that an appeal to the supreme court for a new trial will be made at once and failing in this an appeal will be made before the board of pardons. It is understood there will be no opposition to a commutation of sentence when the case is brought before the pardon board.

The boy shot and killed his grandmother September 5. The crime was not discovered until several days later because the boy locked the body in a room of her home and told her husband she had gone away on a trip to Florida. When the body was discovered the boy confessed he had waited for his grandmother and shot her with a small rifle as she sat on her bed putting on a shoe. Robbery was the motive as she carried about $100 in her stocking which he took and had spent lavishly before the crime was discovered.

Gettysburg Plays Host to Man Supposed to be "Dead"

Gettysburg is playing host today to a distinguished character—a man once pronounced dead—listed in the casualty list of the Civil War as "fatally wounded"—placed aboard a boat with other casualties by physicians in a government hospital at Orleans firm in the belief that he would never survive the ordeal —"choked" out as "gone west," only to find himself, hale and hearty, 60 years later.

Such is the fate that befell Charles S. Barker, member of the New York Monuments Commission, here with Chairman Shaw to complete preparations for the unveiling and dedication of New York's latest monument to their division and brigade commanders who fought in the Civil War.

Barker, a corporal with the New York volunteers, was wounded in an engagement during the conflict and was sent to a hospital. Before his injury, Corporal Barker weighed 195 pounds. After several weeks' struggle between life and death in the government hospitals, Barker's heretofore strong constitution and vitality succumbed to the pain and suffering of his wounds and, when he was placed aboard the steamer bound for Hart Island, he weighed 117 pounds.

Physicians marked him as "dead," all hopes of saving his life having been abandoned when he failed to respond to medical treatment.

Barker lingered and battled against heavy odds for his life and finally won. When his regiment was making ready to be discharged from service at the termination of the rebellion, Barker remained at the post, awaiting his turn. Officials failed to find any record of a "living" Barker, and hence could not release him from service. He was marked dead and army officers could not discharge a "dead" man.

Finally the web and entanglements of official red tape was unwound and Barker was discharged, although records still show that he died in a hospital at Orleans. Corporal Barker, now a member of the New York Monuments Commission, hale and hearty, full of vigor and enthusiasm and enjoying life despite his advanced age, is very much "alive."

Two Sisters Are Wedded Saturday

A double wedding with two sisters as two of the principals was solemnized Saturday by the Rev. Fr. Quinn at the parsonage of the Tancytown church, when Miss Marie Martin was wedded to Norman Yingling, and Miss Clara Martin was married to Robert Harmon. Both brides are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Martin, of near New Oxford, while the two grooms are residents of Gettysburg. A wedding dinner was served Sunday at the home of the two brides' parents.

YORK MAN IS HURT IN CRASH

Two Others, Also of York, Are Held in County Jail, Charged With Reckless Driving.

Joseph Lidie is in the Warner hospital with a shoulder injury, and Oscar Wilhide and another companion, all of York, are in the county jail, charged with reckless driving as the result of a crash between Wilhide's coupe and the touring car of Gordon Boose, Littlestown, three miles east of Gettysburg on the Lincoln Highway at 11:30 o'clock, Sunday night.

Lidie's injuries are said not to be serious. His two companions were not injured, although Wilhide's car was wrecked, and had to be towed away from the scene of the accident. Boose's machine was not badly damaged, and was able to proceed from the scene of the accident under its own power.

According to members of the local substation of the state highway patrol, who were called out, the three occupants of Wilhide's machine had been drinking. The Yorker's machine is said to have sideswiped the Littlestown man's car, causing the accident.

2 Women Injured

Two women were injured, one of them seriously, when an automobile in which they were riding skidded and upset on the Gettysburg and Harrisburg road, just this side of Dillsburg, Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

The injured woman were: Mrs. Michael Patrick, 35 years old, and Mrs. May D. Esposito, 39 years old, both of Hazleton.

Mrs. Patrick suffered deep cuts on the left shoulder and back, cuts about the face and hands, and may have suffered internal injuries. Mrs. Esposito suffered minor cuts on the right leg. Both women were taken to the Harrisburg Hospital. Mrs. Esposito was able to leave the hospital after receiving treatment.

The two women were members of a party of five and were on their way to Hazleton when the accident occurred on a stretch of the highway that had been flooded during the heavy rain of early Sunday morning. The car skidded thirty feet and fell on its side in a ditch.

Michael Patrick, husband of one of the injured women, was driving the car. He and two other occupants escaped injury.

CO. A IS WINNER OF DRILL CONTEST

Cadet-Captain Grayson Peters, Company A, R. O. T. C. unit, of Gettysburg College, led his outfit through an hour's competitive drill, to victory over Company B, favorites to win, Saturday afternoon, as one of the features of the "Mothers-Sons-Daughters" day observance at Gettysburg College.

Captain Peters, Gettysburg product, commanded his outfit with such military preciseness as to win the plaudits of the spectators and the commendation of the reviewing officers, Captain H. D. Gibson, wearer of the distinguished service cross and croix de guerre, commandant of the R. O. T. C. unit at Western Maryland College, Lieutenant William G. Weaver and Lieutenant William G. McAllister, of the reserve corps.

The competing companies were scored for appearance, execution of movements, preciseness, execution of the manual of arms and parade appearance.

JAIL-BREAKING CONSPIRATOR IS GIVEN TWO YEARS

Roy Diamond Sent To Eastern Penitentiary; Hartman Hearing Delayed.

Dissatisfaction with the first degree murder verdict returned against Philip A. Hartman was given by Roy Diamond, 22, of Annville, as one of the reasons he sent Hartman twelve hack saw blades, when the Annville youth was brought before Judge D. P. McPherson for sentence this morning.

The court paid scant attention to that reason, admonishing Diamond that it was not for him to say whether the verdict was justified, and sentenced him to not less than one nor more than two years in the Eastern Penitentiary.

Pleads Guilty

Diamond entered a plea of guilty to a charge of conspiring in an attempt of Hartman to break from the Adams county jail. Diamond's efforts, however, went for naught, his plan for smuggling the hack saw blades into the convicted murderer having gone amiss, by reason of the fact that Mrs. Steven Bordley, colored, Race Horse alley, to whom the saws were sent, was instructed by her husband to turn over the blades to Sheriff John C. Shearer.

Wearing the same sweater he wore when arrested and later arraigned Diamond, pallid of cheek, was brought into court with eleven other prisoners at this morning's session.

Several other prisoners were sentenced before Diamond's case was called by District Attorney John P. Butt. The prosecutor related in detail the facts in connection with Diamond's frustrated efforts to secure the freedom of Hartman. Judge McPherson then began examining the prisoner.

Disliked Sentence

Asked why he sent the hack saw blades, Diamond boldly replied: "Because we were boyhood chums, and he told me not to fail him. I don't think he should have been found guilty of first degree murder. It should have been second degree."

"And so you wanted Hartman to escape because he should have been found guilty of murder in the second degree?" interrogated Judge McPherson. "Yes," the prisoner answered.

Sentence was then pronounced by Judge McPherson. To many courthouse attaches the sentence was considered stiffer than the Annville youth would receive, many expressing the belief that he would receive a sentence of not more than two years in the county jail.

Before noon, the court was kept busy with the press of current business and adjourned without reaching the point of a hearing on the motion for a new trial for Hartman, scheduled for today. George J. Benner, Hartman's counsel, was in court ready to present his side of the case, while Prosecutor Butt and J. Donald Swope, who conducted the prosecution against Hartman, were ready to contend that a new trial was unnecessary.

HORSE IS KILLED

A valuable trotting horse, Senator Hale stock, owned by Detarick Brothers, Hunterstown, was killed Sunday when its leg was found to have been broken by a kick given by another trotting horse owned by the Detaricks. RECEPTION-TEA IS ATTENDED BY MOTHERS-GUESTS

The Mothers' Day reception which was given by Doctor and Mrs. Henry W. A. Hanson Saturday afternoon from 1:30 to 3 o'clock at their home on the College Campus was a most delightful affair. About 400 guests were received, these including students of Gettysburg College and their mothers.

The entertainment consisted of vocal solos by Miss Isabelle Mitchell, Mrs. Rudolph Rosenstengel and A. G. Lansberry. Miss Helen Dine played the piano accompaniment and a group of solos.

Mrs. G. D. Stahle, Mrs. C. F. Sanders, Mrs. Frank Clutz and Mrs. Karl Grimm acted as auxiliary hostesses, and Mrs. Albert Billheimer, Mrs. Jerome Jackson, Mrs. Robert Fortenbaugh, Mrs. T. L. Cline, Mrs. E. H. Seht, Mrs. Robert Marsh, Mrs. W. W. Wood and Mrs. C. B. Stover served the guests with fruit punch and fancy cakes. Huge bouquets of iris, dogwood and spirea, carrying out a color scheme of purple and white, with candelabra to match formed attractive decorations throughout the house.

Improvements To Laurel Dam Will Start About July 1

Improvements to Laurel Dam, an artificial body of water, covering 23 acres, located in the South Mountains in Cumberland county, just across the line from Adams county, for which the state legislature appropriated $10,000 in a bill signed recently by Governor Pinchot, will be started about July 1, it was announced today by members of the committee sponsoring the movement.

A retaining wall of concrete will be built a short distance below the breast of the dam and a walk will be constructed on top of the wall that will permit pedestrians to cross the valley at that point. Stone to be used for a fill will be quarried from the mountain sides. The upper portion of the lake will be deepened and other changes made. The lake is the largest body of mountain water in the southern part of the state and its feeders drain a large area of state forest land.

Members of the committee are: Robert Y. Stuart, state commissioner of Forests and Waters; Judge E. M. Biddle, Jr., Merkle Landis, Carlisle; J. R. Williams, Fayetteville, state forester in charge of the Mischaux preserve, in which the dam is situated; J. Donald Swope, of Gettysburg, and W. C. Tyson, Guernsey.

ON PROBATION IN LIQUOR HEARING

Louis Wagaman Is Also Fined $100; Pleads Guilty to Possessing Intoxicating Liquor.

Louis Wagaman, Square Corners, was placed on probation for one year, fined $100 and assessed the costs, when he entered a plea of guilty to a charge of the illegal possession of intoxicating liquor before Judge D. P. McPherson in court this morning.

R. F. Topper appeared as counsel for Wagaman and spoke of the man's character in the community in which he lived. The beer, found at Wagaman's home, according to Attorney Topper, was purchased from the Bortner Bottling Works, Hanover, as near beer. The half gallon of moonshine liquor also found by the police on the premises was used by Wagaman for medicinal purposes only, the attorney explained.

Calvin Cross, colored, on probation from the Glen Mills school, was sentenced to Huntingdon Reformatory for an indefinite period, when he entered pleas of guilty to three charges of assault and battery, which involved three young white girls of Gettysburg.

Much current business was disposed of by the court during the forenoon and at 2:15 this afternoon, Judge McPherson was disposing of the cases of the six members of the self-styled "Hill gang robbers," charged with larceny and burglary.

SHEPHERD ON TRIAL FOR LIFE

Chicagoan, Charged With Murdering Young Millionaire, Starts Fight in Court.

Chicago, May 18.—Caught in the trail of disaster that has followed the McClintock fortune for generations, William D. Shepherd, last titular owner, today faced trial for murder. He stands charged with slaying by typhoid fever germs the last possessor of the $1,500,000 legacy, William N. McClintock, a youth, who as the ward of Mrs. Shepherd had lived with them 16 years.

Shepherd was indicted March 18, after an inquest instigated by Judge Harry Olson, a friend of the McClintock family. In addition to accusing Shepherd of causing the death of young McClintock, Judge Olson also termed him the central figure in a plot 20 years old and the slayer of McClintock's mother and Dr. Oscar Olson, the judge's brother.

Mrs. Shepherd, one of the two guardians of McClintock, was likened by Judge Olson to Lady Macbeth and was named in the verdict of the coroner's jury as equally guilty with her husband. However, she won vindication when a grand jury refused to indict her.

Young McClintock died in 1924, a few months after reaching his majority, and signing a will drawn by Shepherd and witnessed by Shepherd's house servants. Shepherd was made the chief beneficiary.

This fortune was founded by William Hicklin, who came to America from England many years ago. Hints have been given that his second wife obtained the estate by poisoning her husband and accusation that she in turn was poisoned by her second husband, William McClintock, Sr., father of the dead youth, were made in court, but later withdrawn. McClintock took as his second wife Emma Nelson and soon after the birth of William he was killed in an automobile accident. Shortly after thereafter, the Shepherd's came to live with Mrs. McClintock, Mrs. Shepherd and Mrs. McClintock having been school day friends. When Mrs. McClintock died in 1909 her will made Mrs. Shepherd one of her son's guardians.

Urge Housewives To Preserve Eggs

Pennsylvania housewives are urged by the state bureau of markets to take advantage of the time when eggs are abundant and relatively cheap and preserve them for next winter's use. The two best methods suggested were the use of lime water and salt solution or the water-glass solution.

For the lime water and salt solution market specialists advocate the use of four pounds of quicklime mixed with a small quantity of water to which then is added four gallons of water and two pounds of salt. After stirring the mixture thoroughly it should be allowed to settle and the eggs packed in the clear fluid poured off.

In making the other solution they suggested one and one-half quarts of water-glass to which is added eight quarts of water. Each one of these solutions, they said, was sufficient to preserve thirty dozens of eggs.

WILL IMPROVE ROADS HERE SOON

Highway Department Studying Type of Surface For Battle-field Connecting Links.

Gettysburg's fourteen miles of roads, connecting links between the paved streets of town and the state highways, recently ceded back to the state by the federal government and in unusually poor condition, will be rebuilt this season, according to information received this morning by the Gettysburg Times, from reliable sources in close touch with the department of highways in Harrisburg.

The Times' informant states, "It is urgent that this work be completed during the present season, because next year the Philadelphia Sesqui-Centennial will draw many thousands of people to Pennsylvania from the south and west who will naturally pass through Gettysburg and visit the battlefield. Other thousands from the east and north, finding themselves within a comparatively few miles from Gettysburg, will run up from Philadelphia. Before the time of the Sesqui-Centennial, therefore, these roads must be durably improved."

The information, coming from a reliable source, from a person closely in touch with highway department affairs, states that the roads will be rebuilt this season.

Studying Type of Surface
"Engineers are now considering the surface type to be used to replace the roads now in use," further adds the Times' informant.

"Gettysburg has had enough experience with 'temporary repairs' to these roads and has seen the futility of such repairs. When the highway department gets through with its work there will be no further cause for complaint," continues the informant, adding, "Superintendent Fleming takes his orders from Harrisburg, and the delay in his going to work on the smoothing up of the rough roads is due to the desire of this department to handle the proposition in the best possible manner."

"Action will be taken at once," is the concluding statement of the Times' informant.

Lawn-Weed War Offensive Starts

The annual lawn weed war is on. On the offensive are arrayed the many weeds which swarm rampant through the velvety green of the lawn, while arrayed against them are the "keepers of the sword" to whom Dr. E. M. Gress, state botanist, gives a number of helpful pointers on how to win the fight.

Dandelions, plantain and buckhorn, he said, may be destroyed by the use of gasoline injected into the center or crown of leaves with a sharp pointed oil can or by touching them with a few drops of sulphuric acid. Weeds, which are matted together like ground ivy, heal-all and yarrow, can best be removed by lifting the turf and reseeding with a quick growing grass-like redtop clover.

Crab grass, declared to be one of the most troublesome of the weeds, fails to thrive in the shade and may be smothered out by covering it with tar paper or boards. After lifting the covering the grass can be removed with a sharp toothed rake. Dr. Gress said that while this method was unsightly no other method, except hand weeding, has proven as effective.

RUM BLOCKADE IS SUCCESSFUL

Semi-Official Observation Cruise of Atlantic Reveals Only Twelve Liquor Smuggling Ships.

(By Associated Press.)

New York, May 18.—A semi-official observation cruise over the Atlantic from Narragansett pier, Rhode Island, to Atlantic City, New Jersey, which ended Saturday revealed twelve rum carrying ships in that area which formerly provided anchorage for more than 80 rum vessels at the time the coast guard blockade was inaugurated on May 5.

It was further indicated on the cruise which took a party of newspaper correspondents to points 30 to 40 miles from shore and that virtually no liquor is being smuggled into the country from this area.

As a result of the inspection the commander of the rum blockade said that the work has been entirely successful.

Washington, May 18.—There seems little prospect at present that the United States Navy will be directed to take a hand in the campaign against the rum-smuggling boats now appearing off the east and west coasts. President Coolidge is of the opinion that the Navy as a unit of the national defense should not be required to police rum-row.

SCRAPPING POLICY

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, May 18.—Adoption of a policy looking to the scrapping of upward of four hundred government ships probably will be recommended to the shipping board shortly by its sub-committee on disposal.

Gettysburg College

the affair that it was necessary to hold two banquets simultaneously at two hotels, the Eagle and the Hoffman. More than 400 mothers and their sons were in attendance at both places. Speakers and entertainment features at both hotels were identical.

Dr. George D. Stahley, Gettysburg, was toastmaster at the Eagle Hotel function, while Dr. H. M. Valentine officiated at the Hoffman Hotel.

Presidential Welcome
Welcome was extended the visiting mothers by President Hanson, who also paid high tribute to motherhood, to the high ideals which had been inculcated into the students sent to Gettysburg College and to the bond which had been fused by the visitation of mothers with their sons on the college campus. Other speakers at the dusk of banquets were Dr. C. F. Sanders, who spoke as a representative of the faculty; M. E. Glatfelter, of this year's graduating class, speaking as the representative of the students; Miss Madylin Roth, co-ed representative, and Mrs. Karl J. Grimm, who appeared on behalf of the wives of faculty members.

Responses to the addresses made on behalf of the college and its various representatives were delivered by Mrs. Lewis Manges, Harrisburg, at the Eagle Hotel, and by Mrs. A. H. Durboraw, of Narberth, at the Hoffman Hotel. Both said they were glad for the opportunity of coming to Gettysburg College not only for the closer relationship which it means to them with their sons, but for the inspiration which they had received from association with the college itself and other mothers.

C. S. Thomas, of the college, sang several tenor solos for which he was roundly applauded, and the mothers and their sons joined in singing a number of old familiar songs, including "Perfect Day" and "Alma Mater," the official college song.

Theater Party
After the banquets, a theater party had been arranged, and Brue Chapel was jammed and packed to its utmost for the presentation of "The Fortune Hunter," a farcical comedy, given under the auspices of the Owl and Nightingale Dramatic Club at the institution. Because the scene of the play was laid in a small country town, it had a fetching appeal for the mothers, most of whom had come from towns not much larger.

The play was delightfully presented and ranks with the best efforts of the Owl and Nightingale society, in the opinion of consistent followers of the dramatic club's efforts. Rollicking comedy, with every now and then a dash of pathos, characterized the production, and the mothers seemed to enjoy it to the utmost.

Ending happily, with the hero rewarded and the "villain" punished, the show brought a joyous conclusion to the events of Saturday, and sleep was welcomed by the tired, but jubilant, mothers.

A fanfare of trumpets shortly before 10 o'clock Sunday was the signal for the start of the academic parade, which preceded a Mother's Day service at Brue Chapel. Under cloud-swept skies, which gave a threat of rain, members of the college faculty, all in academic costume, with ribbons of purple, yellow, white and green forming vivid contrast with the black robes and mortars, marched from Glatfelter Hall to the chapel, taking their places on the rostrum. Again Brue Chapel was crowded to overflowing.

heights of oratory and diction in his address, in which he said: "Men build houses, but mothers build homes."

Doctor Hanson told how Gettysburg College stands for four ideals in the training of young men and young women. Enumerating these he said they were development of the physical, mental, social and spiritual natures of every youth under its care.

Before he closed, Doctor Hanson declared that the Mother's Day experiment had so far exceeded the most sanguine expectations of those in charge that plans were already on foot for the next annual observance of the occasion, when, he said, he hoped to welcome every mother and all absent mothers to Gettysburg's campus again.

The student committee in charge of Mother's Day consisted of C. W. Beachem, chairman, Euclid, Pa.; W. E. Gentzler, York, and Kenneth S. Ehrhart, Brodbeck's Station, Pa. Dr. Frank H. Kramer was the faculty supervisor.

Tortured for years by varicose veins Trouble entirely healed by Resinol

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 23:—"I had suffered from varicose veins for 2 1/2 years and had doctored continuously without results as I could not keep off my feet. The pain was so great that I could not sleep and I cried at night until I was completely exhausted. My hair was turning gray and I thought I would lose my mind. Last summer my son had a sore on his chin and Resinol healed it, so I decided to try it myself. In little less than a week I obtained relief and in six months the trouble was entirely healed. I cannot tell you how thankful I am—I am the happiest woman in the world and I owe it all to Resinol." (Signed) Mrs. Gussie Newman, 2424 Orchard St.

They were a black-a-vised, ill-favored pair, these miners upon whose hospitality fate had thrown them. Foreigners of some sort they were, Cornishmen, Moya guessed. But whatever their nationality they were primeval savages untouched by the fourteen centuries of civilizing influences since their forebears ravaged England. To the supernumerous minds of these exhausted young women there was a suggestion of apes in the huge muscle-bound shoulders and the great rough hands at the ends of long gnarled arms. Small shifty black eyes, rimmed with red from drink, suggested cunning, while the loose-lipped heavy mouths added more than a hint of bestiality. It lent no comfort to the study of them that the large whisky bottle was two-thirds empty.

They slouched back to their cards and their bottle. It had been bad enough to find them sullen and inhospitable, but as the liquor stimulated their unhealthy imaginations it was worse to feel the covert looks stealing now and again toward them. Joyce, sleeping fitfully in the arms of Moya, woke with a start to see them drinking together at the table.

"I don't like them. I'm afraid of them," she whispered.

"We mustn't let them know it," Moya whispered in her ear.

For an hour she had been racked by fears, had faced unflinchingly their low laughs and furtive glances.

Now one of the men spoke. "From Goldbanks?"

"Yes."

"You don't live there."

"No. We belong to the English party—Mr. Verinder's friends."

"Oh, Verinder's friends. And which of you is his particular friend?" The sneer was unmistakable.

"We started out this afternoon for wild flowers and the storm caught us," Moya hurried on.

"So you're Verinder's friends, are you? Well, we don't think a whole lot of Mr. Verinder out here."

Moya knew now that the mention of Verinder's name had been a mistake. The relations between the mine owners and the workmen in the camp were strained, and as a foreign non-resident capitalist the English millionaire was especially obnoxious. Moreover, his supercilious manners had not helped to endear him since his arrival.

The man called Dave got to his feet with a reckless laugh. "No free lodgings here for Mr. Verinder's friends. You've got to pay for your keep, my dears."

Misa Dwight looked at him with unflinching eyes which refused to understand his meaning. "We'll pay whatever you ask and double the amount after we reach camp."

"Don't want your dirty money. Give us a kiss, lass. That's fair pay. We ain't above kissing Verinder's friends if he is a rotten slave driver."

Moya rose to her slender height, and the flash of courage blazed in her eyes.

"Sit down," she ordered.

The man stopped in his tracks, amazed at the resolution of the slim tall girl.

"Go on, Dave. Don't let her bluff you," his companion urged.

The miner laughed and moved forward.

"You coward, to take advantage of two girls driven to you by the storm. I didn't think the man lived that would do it," panted Moya.

"You've got a bit to learn, miss. What's the use of gettin' your Dutch up? I ain't good enough for 'ee, like enough."

The girl held up a hand. "Listen!"

They could hear only the wild roar of the storm outside and the low sobs of Joyce as she lay crunched on the bed.

"Well?" he growled. "I'm listenin'. What, then?"

"I'd rather go out into that white death than stay here with such creatures as you are."

"Don't be a fool, lass. Us'n't want to hurt 'ee any," the second man reassured roughly.

"You'll stay here where it's warm. But you'll remember that we're boss in this shack. You've come without being asked. I'm d—d if you'll ride your high horse over me."

"Go on, Dave. Take your kiss, man."

Then the miracle happened. The door opened, and out of the swirling wind-tossed snow came a Man.

CHAPTER IX

Out of the Storm a Man

He stood blinking in the doorway, white-sheeted with snow from head to heel. As his eyes became accustomed to the light they passed with surprise from the men to the young women. A flash of recognition lit in them, but he offered no word of greeting.

Plainly he had interrupted a scene of some sort. The leer on the flushed face of Dave, the look of undaunted spirit in that of the girl facing him, the sheer panic-stricken terror of her crouching companion, all told him as much. Nor was it hard to guess the meaning of that dramatic moment he had by chance chosen for his entrance. His alert eyes took in every detail, asked questions but answered none, and in the end ignored lauch.

"What are you doing here?" demanded one of the miners.

"Been out to the Jack Pot and was on my way back to town. Got caught in the storm and struck for the nearest shelter. A bad night out, Trefoye."

He closed the door, moved forward into the room, and threw off his heavy overcoat.

Moya had recognized him from the first instant. Now Joyce too saw who he was. She twisted lithely from the bed, slipped past Moya, past the miners, and with the sob of a frightened child caught at his hand and arm.

"Oh, Mr. Kilmeny, save us . . . save us!"

She clung to him, shivering back to self-control. This man's presence spelled safety. In the high-laced boots of a mining man, he showed a figure well-knit and graceful, springy with youth, but carrying the poise of power. His clean-cut bronzed face backed the promise; so too did the ease of his bearing.

Moya gave a deep sigh of relief and sat down on the edge of the bed, grown suddenly faint. At last her burden was lifted to stronger shoulders.

"You ain't wanted here, Jack Kilmeny," the standing miner said sourly. He was undecided what to do, perplexed and angry at this unexpected hindrance.

"Seems to be a difference of opinion about that, Peale," retorted the newcomer lightly, kicking snow from the spurs and the heels of his boots.

"Trefoye and me own this cabin. You'll sing small, by gad, or you'll get out."

"You wouldn't put a dog out on a night like this, let alone a man. It would be murder," Kilmeny answered mildly.

"There's horses in the tunnel. You can bed 'em."

Jack glanced around, took in the whisky bottle and their red-rimmed eyes. He nodded agreement.

"Right you are, boys. We three will move over to the tunnel and leave the house to the women."

"You ain't got the say here, not by a d—n sight, Jack Kilmeny. This'll be the way of it. You'll git out. We'll stay. Understand?" Peale ground out between set teeth.

Jack smiled, but his eyes were like steel. "Suppose we go over to the shaft-house and talk it over, boys. We'll all understand it better then."

Kilmeny still stood close to the red-hot stove. He was opening and closing his fingers to take the stiffness of the frost out of them.

"By G—d, no! You go—we stay. See?"

The young man was now rubbing industriously the thumb and forefinger of his right hand with the palm of his left.

"No, I don't see that, Peale. Doesn't sound reasonable to me. But I'll talk it over with you both—in the shaft-house."

Jack's eyes were fastened steadily on Peale. The man was standing close to a shelf in a corner of the cabin. The shelf was in the shadow, but Kilmeny guessed what lay upon it. He was glad that though his legs were still stiff and cold the fingers of his right hand had been massaged to a supple warmth.

"You be warm now, lad. Clear out," warned the big Cornishman.

"Build 'ee a fire in the tunnel, mon," suggested Trefoye.

"We'll all go or we'll all stay. Drop that, Peale."

The last words rang out in sharp command. Quicker than the eye could follow Kilmeny's hand had brushed up past his hip and brought with it a shining thirty-eight.

Taken by surprise, Peale stood stupidly, his hand still on the shelf. His fingers had closed on a revolver, but they had found the barrel instead of the butt.

"Step forward to the table, Peale—with your hand empty. That's right. Now listen. These young women have got to sleep. They're fagged to exhaustion. We three are going over to the shaft-house. Anything you've got to say to me can be said there. Understand?"

The man stood in a stubborn sullen silence, but his partner spoke up.

"No guns along, Kilmeny, eh?"

"No. We'll leave them here."

"Good enough, eh, Peale?"

Trefoye's small eyes glittered. Slyly he winked to his partner to agree, then got a lantern, lit it clumsily, and shuffled out with Peale at his heels.

Joyce clung to Jack's arm, bewitchingly helpless and dependent. A queer thrill went through him at the touch of her soft finger tips.

"You won't leave us," she implored. "You wouldn't, would you?"

ARENDSVILLE LOSES TO N. O.

McSherrystown Triumphs Over Bendersville-Aspers Combination and Midway Wins.

Another upset in the Adams County League came on Saturday, when Arendtsville, favorites to keep their slate clean, lost to the strong New Oxford tribe 11 to 3, while McSherrystown, tied for first place honors by virtue of Gettysburg's forfeited game, which was won by the Bullets last week-end, also kept its perfect average by defeating the Bendersville-Aspers combination 15 to 4. Bigler-ville lost to Midway and Gettysburg and Littlestown did not play.

Gettysburg, with 18 men under contract did not have enough members of the team eligible to play Saturday's contest with Littlestown and Manager Oyler postponed the contest. Littlestown was requested by the local management to postpone the game because of lack of players, but the Littlestown manager refused. Gettysburg could not muster sufficient men to play, and hence was forced to postpone the contest. Littlestown is demanding a forfeited game.

The condition came about when the directors of the league found seven Gettysburg men under contract ineligible to play Saturday's contest, because of the ten-day after signing contract clause.

President Nary stated on Sunday that he discovered after the last directors' meeting that the latter erred in their ruling and that he would assume the responsibility because of his decision in the matter. Mr. Nary stated that Gettysburg could have used the seven men in Saturday's contest, but the Gettysburg management was of the belief that the action of the directors at the last meeting would have to be rescinded before the local club could use the players in question.

If Saturday's contest is forfeited to Littlestown, it will be the second game the local club has lost this season through this medium.

SOME GOOD ADVICE

Here is some good advice on how to get ahead, written and published by the United States government. It appears in a booklet, advertising treasury savings certificates.

"What does thrift mean? It means good management; vigorous growth. "Thrift means spending less than you earn; saving systematically. It does not mean that you stop spending."

"Thrift means securing interest on your savings. Money kept in hiding never earns anything. Put your money out to work. You work for money; make it work for you."

"Learn to know values; the value of your work; the value of the fruits of your labor. Investigate and study merchandise values. Know what you buy before you buy it. Read advertising. Get acquainted with brands and trade marks, and their significance. Weigh expenditures. Put on your thinking cap and keep it on."

"The wise individual is he who so regulates his income and outgo that 'emergencies' are provided for automatically. He knows the meaning of 'peace of mind,' because he has money laid by. His chin is up, his step is brisk, he is master—not the slave—of circumstances."

"To get ahead you must have a simple and definite plan. Hit or miss methods won't do; in the accumulation of money they are positively fatal."

BEAUTY

I have found beauty in a lake of pearl,
A winter scene, with spruce trees edged with snow,
A ridge of mountains where the laurels grow,
A block of lilies where the waters swirl,
A sunset, and a sunrise, and a curl
Upon the brow of one with youth aglow,
But nothing lovelier upon this earth I know
Than is the glad smile of a little girl.
A little girl whose years are scarcely three,
Laughing and tripping lightly into day,
Untouched as yet by fears of what may be,
Believing life all good and meant for play,
In such a face, and in such radiant eyes,
God's loveliest gift of early beauty lies.

Wouldn't the farmers be a happy bunch if they could find an insect which eats nothing but weeds?

Women are not men's equals. We know. We tried to slap one on the back and borrow a dollar from her.

The hole burned in shirts by cigarettes would feed quite a few moths for quite a while.

HEALTH TALKS

The health talk of the Pennsylvania Department of Health is prepared this week by Dr. Mary Riggs Noble, chief, Preschool section, Bureau of Child Health. Dr. Noble says:

"What we must do before six. Not before six o'clock in the morning, but before the sixth birthday!

"From six minutes to six years—that is the time to work to insure a good sound human being for life, and the wise ones tell us that if we have not done the right thing between those dates in a baby's life we have lost out so seriously that it can never be completely made up.

"It seems strange not to be able to go in for reform in health habits later on and recover all of the lost ground.

"As we look about we see on all sides of us examples of 'strong' men and women who are 'perfectly well,' but who were so sickly that their mothers were 'afraid they would never raise them.' Look into that claim: 'perfectly well.' It will rarely bear scrutiny. The poor digestion, the bad heart, the 'can't stand much,' the deceiving over-weight come to the surface when we probe a little and show up the false claim to real health after a puny infancy and early childhood.

"Why not give our children today a fair chance from the beginning and lay a good foundation for strength and robustness that lies in the six good health habits right feeding (plenty of milk, green vegetables well cooked, fresh fruit); right sleeping (enough hours and in fresh air); right bathing (full bath at least twice a week); right clothing (always proper material and amount); right exercise (outdoors in plenty of sunshine); right training (in personal habits, obedience and self-control).

"Doctors' and nurses' advice can help many mothers.

"Weighing and measuring give us a good guide as to the progress a child is making. Spare the measuring rod and spoil the child!"

WHY SKINNY FOLKS TAKE COD LIVER OIL

Gain 5 Pounds in 30 Days or Get Your Money Back

Because it is richer in vitamins than any other food in the world.

Doctors prescribe it for rickets and anaemia in children and for tuberculosis, malnutrition and convalescence in grown up people.

As a producer of weight—good healthy flesh—there is nothing in the world so good.

But it's nasty tasting, horrible smelling stuff that often upsets the stomach so doctors now are ordering cod liver oil in tablet form.

You've got to take on weight when McCoy's Cod Liver Oil compound Tablets are taken regularly—you simply can't help it.

It's so good that if it doesn't put on five pounds of good healthy flesh on any skinny man or woman in thirty days the McCoy Laboratories of New York authorize People's Drug Store and all druggists to return the price you paid for it.

Be sure to ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—sixty tablets—60 cents. One woman put on fifteen pounds in five weeks and they are especially valuable to weak, thin children.—adv.

RHEUMATISM

Rheuma, the marvelous rheumatism remedy, sold on the no-cure no-pay plan by People's Drug Store and druggists everywhere. Acts quickly, safely, surely. It quickly drives from the system all the poisons that cause stiffness and pain in the joints and muscles.—adv.
